"I hope that people who eat Vital Farms eggs know how much time, stress, and care is put into every single egg they're eating. Farmers are putting so much work and care into raising their animals."

vitalfarms If you know anything about us - you know we're pretty partial to the girls of Vital Farms. So we'd be remiss if we missed the chance to celebrate them a little egg-stra all month long during #NationalChickenMonth .. But we've got even better news - we want you to celebrate with us! Starting tomorrow, and continuing throughout the month of vitalfarms  About every 21 days, we move the girls to a new part of the pasture. This gives the land time to regenerate – which gives the girls fresh greenery and critters to forage on. With 8 paddocks (or parts of the pasture), the girls are able to enjoy all nature has to offer year-round.

Today on story, we're chatting with Murray Schrock from Cedar Gap vitalfarms  While we only have a few Summer Fridays left this year, every day feels like a Summer Friday for our feathered friends! With room to roam, grass to graze, and plenty of sunshine to soak up year-round, our girls know the meaning of work-life balance and Vital Farms knows the meaning of pasture-raised. At Vital Farms, pasture-raised is more than a label on the carton. We hold
